The climax was reached yeaterday at the poultry show in Madison Square Garden when the giving of awards in all the regular classes was completed, both for the cats and for the fowls. The prises for the best exhibition and display pens were the feature in the poultry judging. For the fourth consecutive year the special award for the best display of Light Brahmas, the largest breed of chickens at the show, went to Harvey C. Wood of Bound Brook, N. J. This famous variety, of ancient Asiatic origin, rivals the Thanksgiving turkey in would appear that most of the college and the college and was heavily backed at 2 throughout.
